

Weekly Discovery

Our selections to inspire and ignite ideas!

12 October 2015 – 16 October 2015

BUSINESS

"40 Under 40" Young People In Business!

Be inspired by these 40 most influential young people in business under the age of 40. It profiles individual disruptors, innovators, and yes – rebels!

Source: Fortune (September 2015)

ENGINEERING

The Man Behind The Martian – A software engineer

Did you know that the author of the book "The Martian" is a software engineer? He refers to himself as a 'space nerd' and most aerospace technologies are actually plausible. Find out more from this interesting interview about him and the sci-fi novel.

Source: IEEE Spectrum (October 2015)

TECHNOLOGY

Top 10 Strategic Technology Trends For 2016

Find out the latest trends in technology identified by Gartner, a leading market research firm, as strategic for many organizations in 2016.

Source: Forbes (October 2015)

ARCHITECTURE

A Primitive Hut To Help Solve Los Angeles' Housing

Imagine living in a hut that shimmers in sunlight and glows from within at night. Such a lightweight backyard house has been developed in Los Angeles based on old-fashioned huts, using recycled materials, in the hope of solving the city's shortage of housing. Isn't that a great sustainable and functional space?

Source: Architectural Review (September 2015)

SCIENCE

Sleep On It!

Not getting enough sleep? It may affect your health and memory more than we think it does. Plan to get to bed early tonight!

Source: Scientific American (October 2015)

TECHNOLOGY

A Pint-Size Companion

Puppeteering has never been more fun with the 9-inch Plen robot! Thanks to a microprocessor and 18 tiny motors, it can perform complex movements with a smartphone app – even you can invent new moves with its open-source software!

Source: Popular Science (November 2015)

Read more articles by this author!